

HYPOTHESIS 5

The superior court entered an order granting the wife control and authority to list the jointly owned house for sale. The wife contacted a listing agent to help sell the house. The husband placed a "for sale by owner" sign on the front lawn. The husband refused the listing agent's request to remove his sign. When workers later came to install the agent's "for sale" sign, the husband became irate and tore the post out of the ground. The husband also placed a Post-it Note on the front door of the house, stating, "Buyer Beware Title is unlikely to be cleared for A sale—call [husband's phone number]." The husband then sent an e-mail to the agent and to the wife's telling them that they could not sell the home. The husband is an attorney.

What RPC's may have been violated?