

HYPOTHESIS 2

The State has a statute, Appeals From Agency Z Act, that allows for appeals in court for administrative orders made by the highest level in the administrative agency Z. Attorney filed a lawsuit that is relevant to the work of the administrative agency Z, but no administrative agency action or decision was ever taken or made.

After the trial court decision dismissing the lawsuit for failure to state a claim, attorney appealed. He claims the trial erred in finding the failure to state a claim. He also asserts a claim under the Appeals From Agency Z Act.
